Introduction

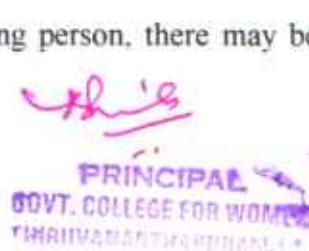

Mentoring involves a one-to-one relationship. Usually an older person who is more experienced is seen working with a younger person, who is usually less experienced. It involves getting to know another person and providing her/him with support that suits her/his individual needs. The mentor uses her/his expertise and practical wisdom to provide enrichment, inspire dreams and help in the pursuit of realistic goals. Mentoring may be defined as a formalized process whereby a more knowledgeable and experienced person acts as a supportive role of overseeing and encouraging reflection and learning within a less experienced and knowledgeable person, so as to help that person's career and personal development (Roberts, 2000).

Characteristics of the mentoring relationship

- It is a helping relationship and shares its aim of enabling the other to make appropriate changes with counseling. It involves supportive action.
- It is a relationship, the purpose of which is to encourage learning and change. Though it is not teaching, it may use a teaching approach as and when appropriate.
- It is a learning partnership, involving the acquisition of knowledge.
- It is a reciprocal process where both mentors and mentee's benefit. Mentees (protégés) get both intangible (e.g., increased self-esteem, more favorable academic attitudes) and tangible (e.g., better academic achievement) benefits. In contrast, mentors obtain intangible benefits such as psychological gratification and gaining a sense of generativity through mentoring.
- It is a dynamic process that unfolds over time, defined by the types of support provided by the mentor to the protégé.
- Techniques of mentoring range from discussing, questioning, challenging, providing opportunities, confronting to comforting.
- In the relationship of a mentor to a young person, there may be elements of tutoring.

Mentoring is a process in which a more knowledgeable and experienced person activates a supportive role towards a younger and less experienced person.

The process of mentoring is oriented towards meeting the career and personal counseling, role modeling, etc., but these functions alone are narrow to encompass the meaning of mentoring.

Who is a Mentor?

A mentor may be defined as a “teacher, advisor, or sponsor”; someone, often half a generation older, who could help accelerate the development of another in his age-related transitions - Levinson (1979). A mentor guides or directs a young person toward thoughtful decision making; helps the youth to practice new skills; provides positive reinforcement; listens to concerns of the young person, depending on the interests and needs of the youth. A mentor may therefore act as a “professional guide who nurtures and promotes the learning and success of his or her protégé” - Sands et al. (1992).

Functions of a Mentor

Mentors need to manage the relationship, encourage, nurture, teach, offer mutual respect and respond to mentee's needs (Clutterback, 2004). In addition, mentors need high self-awareness to recognize and manage themselves in mentoring relationships. Mentor acts as a teacher, sponsor, counsellor, developer of skills and intellect, host, guide, exemplar and one who supports and facilitates the realization of the young person's dream (Levinson, 1978). A mentor is a person who oversees the career and development of the mentee through teaching, counselling, providing psychological support, protecting and at times promoting or sponsoring. The mentor may perform any or all of the above functions during the mentoring relationship (Zey, 1984).

The Process of Mentoring

Mentoring may be of two types:

- Instrumental mentoring- focuses on assisting the mentee in accomplishing certain skills or goals, resulting in the mentee's personal development
- Psychosocial mentoring (developmental mentoring) – focuses directly on building a quality mentor-mentee relationship, which leads to the mentee's development and the accomplishment of developmental outcomes

Phases of Mentoring

Phase I: Preparation

In the first phase of mentoring, the mentor needs to get prepared for the process. The mentor has to understand that this is a serious business and has to prioritize her/his agendas to suit the needs of the program. Becoming mentor to 5-6 students is not a simple task. This would demand personal and emotional commitment from the mentor's part for a substantial period of time. All efforts in the mentoring relationship would focus on helping the mentee reach her/his goals. In this phase the mentor could reflect on a few questions and find answers to them. Reading on mentoring can be of extra help.

➤ Exercises for mentors in Phase I

- 1. Ask yourself(See box)
- 2. Life Tree: A self-reflection exercise

Draw a tree that represents your life. Your tree can look any way you would like it to look, but should include the following:

Roots: Roots nourish a tree. The people you represent with roots are the people who supported you while growing up, or are still supporting you in some way. It doesn't matter what you feel about these people, just draw a root for each one. Each root should have a small picture representing the person it belongs to. Just a small, simple picture, squiggle or shape that will help you remember which person that root represents. When you think of that person, what comes to mind? These pictures only need to have meaning for you. If someone else, looking at the picture, can't figure out what they mean, that's fine. Only you need to be able to recognize what those pictures mean when you look at it later.

Branches: Anyone you regard as your 'inner circle' should have a branch. Draw one branch for each family member. Usually you would draw a branch for each of your brothers or sisters. But you can also include a friend, or another family member that means a lot in your life. Alongside

Questions to ask yourself in the Preparation Phase

Why have I become a mentor?

What do I want to offer?

What are my own thinking/psychological/working styles?

How do they affect the way I interact with others?

What is my attitude towards self development?

*Who has been a mentor to me?
What have I gained?*

What is my idea of mentoring?

each branch - draw a little picture to represent the person it belongs to.

Flowers:Draw a flower for each thing in your life that makes you feel good about yourself. Draw a little picture inside each flower of the thing that makes you feel good.

Leaves:Draw a leaf for each significant event in your life. A significant event is anything that happened that changed you or your life in some way. Draw a little picture inside each leaf of the important event.

Fruits:Draw a fruit for each of your achievements no matter how big or small. Inside each fruit draw a little picture to represent your achievement. Sometimes the fruits (achievements) are the same as the flowers (things that make you feel good about yourself). That's fine! Draw them twice.

To interpret your Living Tree, look at your tree as a whole. Remember, this drawing is done in your 'language' of symbols and pictures. Only you really know what they mean. These are meant to enhance the self awareness of the teacher thereby preparing her/him to take up the role of a mentor.

Objectives of Phase II

- Establishing rapport and forming a bond.
- Know your mentee
- Know her/his expectations from the relationship
- State your concerns and expectations from the relationship
- Establish a working relationship
- Form a contract

Phase II: Initiation and orientation

This includes the first few (2-3) meetings between the mentors and their mentees. Before the mentoring process can gather momentum, it is important to form a strong base/foundation. The first step towards this end is to know your mentee. Mentees may be met personally so that their personal stories may be gathered. It is important for the mentor to know her/his mentees in and out. You may ask mentees about their personal styles, preferences, opinions etc. This will help you gauge the approach you would use to interact with your mentee over the next phases. Gathering family details, personal and career goals would help you along these lines. The mentor also should introduce oneself and give a brief sketch of her/his career and other achievements, if any. It would be nice if the mentor could share a personal experience of having been mentored in her/his life and the benefits of having gone through that experience. Disclosing one's personal experiences at this stage could help in establishing initial rapport. (Rapport may be defined as a state of emotional and mental connection between two people that also includes understanding and empathy.)

➤ Skills for Phase II

Both verbal and non-verbal communication skills augment the establishment of mutual trust and understanding. Micro-skills such as the use of appropriate gestures such as nods, eye-contact and a smiling face with a relaxed posture by the mentor carry a lot of significance to the mentee. This provides them with a feeling of being understood and accepted, which in turn will help the mentee open up. Other important factors to be considered by the mentor while communicating with the mentee, are being non-judgmental, showing respect towards the mentee's concerns and being genuine.

Active listening skills are a set of abilities focused on giving appropriate feedback to the issues mentees bring into the mentoring relationship. It involves attending, listening, paraphrasing, reflecting and summarizing. The mentor can attend to what the mentee says by the use of certain non-verbal cues and asking specific questions. Maintaining eye-contact, use of appropriate nods, a smiling face and a non-judgmental stance can help to attend to the mentee's concerns. Listening involves both listening to the verbal message and the emotional tone of the mentee's message. To test what you have understood, the mentor could restate in fewer words what was told by the mentee. This allows you to test whether you have understood what the mentee to say. This could also convey understood her/him.

NON
STANCE

primarily meant to the mentee that you have

After getting to know your mentee, it is important to know what her/his expectations from the mentoring relationship are. You must also clarify what is it that you are going to offer. Forming a contract, which is a formal/informal and/or written/unwritten plan of how the objectives of the program may be met, is another objective of this phase. In this phase, decisions such as where and how often mentors would meet their mentee/s would be taken. Writing a list of mentor and mentee expectations is an activity that can be carried out at this phase. Also writing down a plan of how these expectations may be met by both parties will be useful.

Thus the aim of establishing a working relationship would be fulfilled. Phase II is important as it forms the base upon which the larger objectives of the mentoring process can be accomplished.

➤ Tool for Phase II

Ice Breaking

An ice breaker is an activity, game, or event that is used to welcome and warm up the conversation among participants in a meeting, training class, team building session, or other event. Any event that requires people to comfortably interact with each other and a facilitator is an opportunity to use an ice breaker. In a mentoring program, a mentor and her/his mentees altogether could engage in a game to initiate ice breaking. In a college, all students enrolled in the WWS and the mentors could conduct ice breaking

A few Ice breaking techniques

Fact or Fiction

Ask everyone to write on a piece of paper three things about themselves which may not be known to the others in the group. Two are true and one is not. Taking turns they read out the three 'facts' about themselves and the rest of the group votes which are true and false.

Fact or f

Interview

Divide the mentees into pairs. Ask them to take three minutes to interview each other. Each interviewer has to find 3 interesting facts about their partner. Bring everyone back together and ask everyone to present the 3 facts about their partner to the rest of the group.

My name is

Go around the group and ask each mentee to state her/his name and attach an adjective that not only describes a dominant characteristic, but also starts with the same letter of her/his name e.g. dynamic Divya, magnificient Manoj. Write them down and refer to them by this for the rest of the day.

sessions/games with one of the mentors acting as a facilitator.

Tools for the mentees

1. SWOT analysis

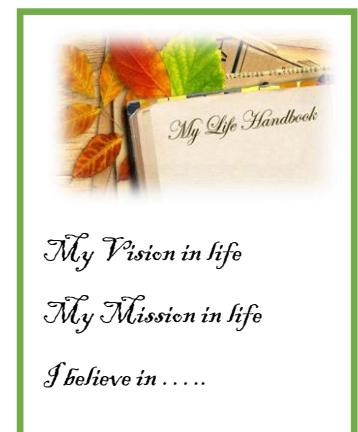

A SWOT analysis is a structured plan regarding the strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and threats of an individual. This activity will help individuals to evaluate their current positions and make future plans/set goals. SWOT analysis aims to identify the key internal and external factors seen as important to achieving an objective. SWOT analysis groups key pieces of information into two main categories: 1) internal factors – the strengths and weaknesses internal to the individual and 2) external factors – the opportunities and threats presented by the environment external to the individual.

2. ‘My Life Handbook’

Each individual mentee may be encouraged to prepare a My Life Handbook which is a personalized account of one’s vision and mission in life, principles and values and goals – short term and long term – and action plans to achieve these.

Vision is a future oriented description of outcomes an individual wants to accomplish. It defines the optimal desired future state—the mental picture—of what one wants to achieve over time, say in five, ten or more years. ‘I want to become a successful human being’, ‘my vision in life is to grow and keep expanding’, ‘my vision in life is to buy a house of my own’, ‘I want to build a business empire of my own and that’s my vision for life’ are all examples of vision statements.

Mission means why an individual exists or what the essence of one’s existence means or simply what one wants to be. It does not define a long term future state but is more concerned with the present state. It talks about the present leading to the future, and how one gets to where one wants to be. It answers the questions of: “What do I do?”, “How do I do it?”, and “Who do I do it for?” and “What makes me different”. ‘My mission is to learn and be open to experiences’, ‘I want to write academic papers in international journals’ etc. are example of some mission statements.

It is important while writing vision and mission statements that these be concise, realistic, easy to memorize and summarize an individual’s intentions, values and commitment to these values. It is equally important that these vision and mission statements be reviewed regularly as it is subject to changes as the individual is transforming too.

The next important thing in the handbook should be the most important guiding principles in an individual's life. These are important for an individual as it could be a strongly held belief. These could be life adages or some beliefs or inspirational quotes. These could reflect core values an individual follows in her/his life. Examples are – honesty, trustworthiness, responsibility etc.

Phase III: Goal setting and Exploration

This phase marks the development of direction and purpose in the mentoring relationship. The mentee is encouraged to speak about what she/he wants – from life and from the relationship. The goals could be set by referring to the SWOT analysis carried out in the earlier activity. The goals could be set in such a way to address the weaknesses and threats and increase the strengths and opportunities.

Objectives of Phase III

- Setting goals related to various spheres of life – career, personal, social and emotional
- Exploring possible options
- Identifying threats and weaknesses
- Acknowledging the positives
- Analyzing current scenario
- Decision making

Skill for Mentees in Phase III: Setting SMART goals

The key to setting goals is ‘SMART’. The following are the characteristics of effective goal setting.

Specific	Make sure your goals have clarity.
Measurable	Make sure that your goals can be measured and are in quantifiable terms.
Achievable	Make sure your goals are challenging, but realistic.
Relevant	Make sure your goals are consistent with your other goals and overall objective.

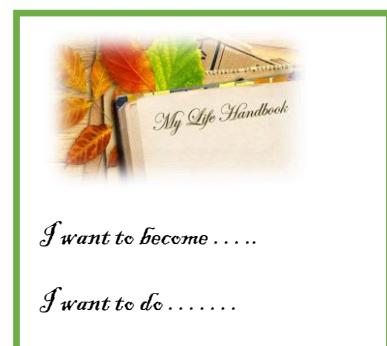

Time-bound

Make sure you develop a timeline to keep your goals on track.

Mentor's Role in Setting Goals for Mentees: Identifying key areas on which to work with is the desirable outcome of the goal-setting phase. This is not a task everyone is good at. Individuals vary in their capacities to identify what they want from life. The mentor will have to cater to these individual variations while working with the mentees. The mentor may have to help the mentee explore the various areas of her/his life she/he wants to change.

Sometimes, this may not be easy for the mentee, owing to the mentee's inexperience. In such cases, the mentor would have to take an active role in facilitating reflection in the mentee. Activities such as the SWOT, the My Life Handbook, the Wheel of Life etc. could be referred to at this point. The mentor and the mentee could spend more than 1 or 2 sessions working on these activities together.

For some other mentees, goal-setting may not be a problem as they are already attuned to a larger scheme of things in life and future. If you speak to such individuals, they will be very eloquent regarding their purpose in life. In such cases, the mentor's task does not become any easier. The mentee might not necessarily have set goals that match with her/his abilities or s/he might have set multiple goals. Often these goals are set by the family and for the same reason these may not be personally owned by the mentee. Helping the mentee take responsibility for one's goals and actions will be the agenda for communication between the mentor and mentee in such cases.

In general, the mentor will require skills of clarification, negotiation, reflection and summarizing in this stage. Some of the assets that mentors could cash in on are being self-aware, reflective skills, critical thinking ability and communication skills. These sets of competencies can help the mentor to assist mentee in self-reflection and exploration of possibilities. The mentor could work as a role model by modeling these competencies for the mentee in an experiential manner.

Based on the reflections carried out in this phase, decisions regarding what, how, when and where need to be taken. This phase is usually the longest of all phases. It encompasses a range of activities that may be redefined as a process. This act of redefinition is what the mentor should take up as a core issue. Often mentees may not be self-aware of one's strengths either due to ignorance or due to self-devaluation or due to the lack of personal agency in one's life. The core issue, usually the goal is identified and clarified by the mentor and communicated to the mentee.

The current scenarios and the destination points are both analyzed to help arriving at the action plan, which is the agenda for the next phase.

Tools for Mentees in Phase III

1. ‘My Life Handbook’

The mentee could continue writing the ‘My Life Handbook’. The next on list is an individual’s goal that has to be a SMART one, as stated above.

Both long-term and short-term goals have to be put up with specifications regarding time frames within which to achieve those. Goals are to be in alignment with one’s guiding principles and values and when stated clearly, they take an individual closer to her/his vision.

2. Wheel of Life

The wheel of life is a useful tool which can be used to give vivid visual representation of the way one’s life is currently, compared with the way one would ideally like it to be. It is called the "Wheel of Life" because each area of your life is mapped on a circle, like the spoke of a wheel.

Phase IV: Action-plan, Implementation and Reviewing

This phase begins with drawing an action plan of how an individual wishes to achieve the goals also has to be included. An action plan will answer the following questions: What needs to be done? How should it be done? By when? How will you know when you've succeeded?

Both the mentor and the mentee work together to draw action-plans those are time-bound. Important communication skills in this phase include active listening skills, empathy and reflective ability. Success in this phase will depend on how much mentee-driven the activities planned are. All programs and classes planned out during this phase must be well thought out and must be in tandem with goals set by the mentee in the earlier phase. For implementing these plans, the mentor will require good liaison skills. It would be useful to be a part of a network of resources, by keeping abreast of information regarding the best available resource-persons in respective areas. Field-visits, exposure trips, conducting

Objectives of Phase V

- Dissolution of the mentoring relationship
- Unwinding and resetting boundaries
- Recognizing and acknowledging mentee's personal growth
- Redefining the mentoring relationship

exhibitions, writing academic papers etc. – a range of activities may be planned. Equipping mentees with external assets such as English speaking skills, writing skills, public speaking skills etc. are other actions that can be implemented.

Reviewing on a regular basis as to what has been happening internally to the mentees is of utmost importance. They are constantly changing, so it is only natural to expect that their goals and action-plans might change too. If so, reworking on the vision, mission statements, checking on the values and guiding principles etc. will be useful to bring out these issues into the mentoring context.

Objectives of Phase IV

- Making action-plans related to the goals set in Phase III
- Separate action-plans for areas - career, personal, social and emotional
- Implementing the plans
- Skills-building
- Providing opportunities for learning

Phase V: Unwinding and Moving on

Unwinding should start occurring as the mentee has started moving in the direction of her/his goals. Often at this phase, mentees seem to even outgrow their mentors. It is a natural outcome of the mentoring relationship. Mentors need to acknowledge this and recognize this as a positive sign. The frequency of meetings between mentor and the mentee may come down in this phase. The mentor may very naturally experience insecurity like a parent of an emerging adult. Reflective abilities in a mentor can help them outgrow these natural feelings. Bringing a closure to the contract, reflecting on the positive aspects of the relationship, gathering feedback from your mentee – all these would help in this phase. Gradually, the mentoring relationship should transform into any other casual relationship or as it is called a professional friendship. It is important that the mentor loosens strings so that the mentee experiences a sense of growth. This will help the mentee transfer benefits she/he gained from the mentoring relationship to other meaningful relationships in her/his life and move on to develop a transformed self.

2. Communication Styles (Heron)

Authoritative

- Prescriptive - giving advice
- Informative - imparting information
- Confrontational - directly challenging

Facilitative

- Supportive - understanding and encouraging
- Cathartic - allowing the release of emotions
- Catalytic - encouraging deeper exploration

Appendix 2:Mentoring Approach

1. OARS

O – Open-ended questions are those questions that cannot be answered with a yes or no. They allow the student to “tell his/her story” and provide you with information about the student as a learner, how best to meet his/her needs or about the issue of concern. For example:

“Tell me more about ____.”

“What happened next?”

A – Affirmations are useful for strengthening the professor-student relationship.

Sincerity and careful judgment in the use of affirmations shows your interest and concern, while disingenuous or trite comments can erode the relationship and create negativity. These morale-boosting statements can help build confidence and increase feelings of empowerment in students, and they can also be used to encourage specific behaviors and recognize students' hard work. For example:

“You did very well on the last exam.”

“I noticed that you arrived to class on time, I appreciate that.”

R-Reflective listening enables students to hear their comments aloud through another person's voice. It shows that you are listening and understanding what the student is telling you. This tool can draw attention to inconsistencies in behavior and goals without judgment. Varying your technique can keep your conversation more interesting and less programmed.

Some examples:

“It sounds like you want to create new study habits, but you don't know where to start.”

“If I am hearing you correctly, you prepared for the exam by reading the chapter notes, but that was not enough.”

S - Summary statements bring the conversation to a conclusion. They need not be elaborate and you can start by simply saying that you want to summarize the conversation. For the student, it is chance to correct things and provide additional information. The statements can also be a reminder of action that needs to be taken. An example:

“So, today we discussed some possible solutions to get you to class on-time, and learned that you want to take action to help solve the problem.”

2. FRAMES

F – Feedback must be delivered in a clear, non-judgmental way that articulates discrepancies in the current behavior and the goal or new behavior. These are best stated as facts rather than opinions, which might be dismissed as “just an opinion.”

R – Responsibility links the problematic behavior with the action of the individual. It can be a clear reminder that the behavior is “owned” by the student and therefore, is up to the student to change if s/he chooses to.

A – Advice can be used to provide alternatives to the undesirable behavior, to help negotiate challenging situations, or to build paths around an obstacle. But, like any advice, it is up to the individual to consider the advice and decide whether or not to take action. Avoid becoming emotionally invested in whether or not a student accepts your advice. Your role is to simply provide a new perspective or an option to consider.

M – Menus offer more than one solution to a problem and allow the individual to choose the path that will potentially be the most effective and helpful for the current challenge. Do not discount any potential solution as unworkable; it is up to the student to make that judgment.

E – Empathy allows you to build rapport by acknowledging that change can take effort and work, although this is not the case for all individuals, so it must be used with caution and sincerity.

S – Self-efficacy increases the likelihood that the individual will feel empowered and capable of making a change and following through with a new behavior long-term. Express your belief that the individual has the potential to be successful and that s/he has your support. Words of encouragement can be very helpful, as are words of praise, when used with care.

CIRCULAR

It has been decided to strengthen the college level students' mentorship programme for empowering the students with appropriate guidance for achieving heights in career and job sectors and thereby helping them to face the challenges in life and to attain success. The mentoring programme is intended to include all students in UG and PG programmes, where one teacher is entrusted with the charge of a group of students comprising of 15-20 members, by ensuring that students in a particular department come under the responsibility of a teacher in the same department, as far as possible. The mentors should take due care in meeting each student in their group at least once in a week for understanding the problems and issues faced by them by building a rapport and mutual trust, to suggest possible solutions to their problems and to evaluate their progresses in academic growth and personality development.

As indicated above, mentors are hereby deputed with group of students as per the list attached herewith, for the academic year 2019-20. Detailed guidelines related to the programme are provided in the book attached.
